Henry Rutgers Professor of Earth, Ocean and Atmospheric Sciences

Rutgers University – New Brunswick seeks an accomplished scientist to serve as the first Henry Rutgers Professor of Earth, Ocean and Atmospheric Sciences. The successful candidate will conduct innovative research as a member of Rutgers’ newly formed Institute of Earth, Ocean and Atmospheric Sciences (EOAS; <http://eoas.rutgers.edu/>). The Institute is an interdisciplinary community fostering research, education, and outreach about Earth’s interior, continents, oceans, atmosphere, and biosphere, their interactions and co-evolution through our planet’s history, and humanity’s dependence and impacts upon these systems. Candidates should be internationally recognized for their research, have a demonstrated commitment to cross-disciplinary collaboration, and possess a commensurate record of publications, grants, teaching and service. The appointment will be at the level of Full or Distinguished Professor. In addition to being an EOAS member, the successful candidate will be appointed in one or more disciplinary departments.

A member of the Big Ten, the Committee on Institutional Cooperation and the Association of American Universities (AAU), Rutgers University – New Brunswick is America’s eighth oldest institution of higher learning and New Jersey’s premier public research university. Rutgers has a strong tradition of cross-disciplinary research and institutions that support collaborative work, including the Rutgers Climate Institute, the Rutgers Energy Institute and EOAS. Rutgers has considerable strengths in Earth system sciences across multiple departments, whose faculty include National Academy of Sciences members and Intergovernmental Panel on Climate Change authors. Rutgers University – New Brunswick is committed to seeking solutions for a more sustainable world, which is a pillar of its new strategic plan.

Applicants should send a letter of interest and CV to eoassearch@rutgers.edu. Review of candidates will commence June 1, 2015 and continue until the position is filled. Please direct questions to the Chair of the search committee at eoassearch@rutgers.edu.

An equal opportunity employer, Rutgers University is committed to building a diverse community and encourages applications from women and minority candidates.
